The Davis Patent does away with Turning Works or Sapper, as it is provided with three sets of collars and sapping knives on the saw arbor, and saps the bolt at the same time it is sawing. The arbor extends across the Machine, and the saw is outside of the frame, which prevents the saw-dust from clogging the gearing, and, in changing saws, you simply take the nut off end of arbor, and remove collars and saw without disturbing arbor.
The saw runs 2200 revolutions per minute, and the Machine will cut from 5 to 6 M. per day; an average of 500 per day over the old style machine.

EXTRACTS FROM HIS FORTHCOMING AUTOBIOGRAPHY—HIS GENEALOGY—BOYHOOD REMINISCENCES—ADMISSION TO WEST POINT—WAR INCIDENTS, ETC

The New York Commercial Advertiser prints the following:

The work on which Gen. Grant has been engaged during many months,* and to which he has given such strength as disease has from time to time spared to him during the weary weeks of his illness, will be published very soon. The book takes the form of an autobiography, and is written in a spirit of entire candor and unreserve, which makes it preeminently the most satisfactory life of the great captain that could have been written. A number of extracts will serve better than any formal commentary to indicate the character and interest of the work.

THE DEDICATION

The following dedication is printed in fac simile of Gen. Grant's manuscript:

"These volumes are dedicated to the American soldier and sailor.

U. S. GRANT

"New York, May 23, 1885."

GEN. GRANT'S FAMILY

As to his origin, Gen. Grant says: "My family is American, and has been for generations, in all its branches, direct and collateral. Mathew Grant, the founder of the branch in America, of which I am a descendant, reached Dorchester, Mass., in May, 1630. In 1635 he moved to what is now Windsor, Ct., and was the surveyor of that colony for more than 40 years. He was, also, for many years of the time town clerk. He was a married man when he arrived at Dorchester, but his children were all born in this country. His oldest son Samuel, took lands on the east side of Connecticut river, opposite Windsor, which have been held and occupied by descendants of his to this day. I am of the eighth generation from Mathew Grant, and seventh from Samuel. Mathew Grant's first wife died a few years after their settlement in Windsor, and he soon after married the widow Rockwell, who, with her first husband, had been fellow-passengers with him and his first wife on the ship Mary and John, from Dorchester, Eng., in 1630. Mrs. Rockwell had several children by her first marriage, and others by her second. By intermarriage, two or three generations later, I am descended from both the wives of Mathew Grant. In the fifth descending generation, my great-grandfather, Noah Grant, and his younger brother, Solomon, held commissions in the English army in 1756, in the war against the French and Indians. Both were killed that year. My grandfather, also named Noah, was then but nine years old. At the breaking out of the war of the revolution, after the battles of Concord and Lexington, he went with a Connecticut company to join the continental army, and was present at the battle of Bunker Hill. He served until the fall of Yorktown, or through the entire revolutionary war. He must have been on furlough part of the time—as I believe most of the soldiers of that period were—for he married in Connecticut during the war, had two children and was a widower at the close."

THE COLT STORY.

Here is a reminiscence of boyhood: "There was a Mr. Ralston living within a few miles of the village who owned a colt which I very much wanted. My father had offered $20 for it, but Ralston wanted $25. I was so anxious to have the colt that, after the owner left, I begged to be allowed to take him at the price demanded. My father yielded, but said $20 was all the horse was worth, and told me to offer that price. If it was not accepted, I was to offer $22.50, and if that would not get him, to give the $25. I at once mounted a horse and went for the colt. When I got to Mr. Ralston's house, I said to him: 'Papa says I may offer you $20 for the colt, but if you won't take that I am to offer $22.50, and if you won't take that to give you $25.' It would not require a Connecticut man to guess the price finally agreed upon. This story is nearly true. I certainly showed very plainly that I had come for the colt and meant to have him. I could not have been over eight years old, when he went blind, and I sold him for $20. When I went to Maysville to school in 1836, at the age of fourteen, I recognized my colt as one of the blind horses working on the treadwheel of the ferryboat."

HIS APPOINTMENT TO WEST POINT.

Following is an account of Grant's appointment to West Point: "My father received a letter from Hon. Thomas Morris, then United States Senator from Ohio. When he read it he said to me: 'Ulysses, I believe you are going to receive the appointment.' 'What appointment?' I inquired. 'To West Point; I have applied for it.' 'But I won't go,' I said. He said he thought I would, and I thought so, too, if he did. I really had no objection to going to West Point, except that I had a very exalted idea of the requirements necessary to get through. I did not believe I possessed them, and could not bear the idea of failing. There had been four boys from our village, or its immediate neighborhood, who had graduated, and never a failure of any one appointed from Georgetown, except in the case of the one whose place I was to take. He was the son of Dr. Bailey, our nearest and most intimate neighbor. Young Bailey had been appointed in 1837. Finding before the January examination following, that he could not pass, he resigned and he went to a private school, and remained there until the following year, when he was reappointed. But before the next examination he was dismissed. Dr. Bailey was a proud and sensitive man, and felt the failure of his son so keenly that he forbade his return home. During my first year's encampment, Gen. Scott visited West Point and reviewed the cadets. With his commanding figure, his quite colossal size and showy uniform, I thought him the finest specimen of manhood my eyes had ever beheld, and the most to be envied. I could never resemble him in appearance, but I believe I did have a presentiment for a moment that some day I should occupy his place on review, although I had no intention then of remaining in the army. But my experience in a horse trade ten years before, and the ridicule it caused me, were too fresh in my mind for me to communicate this presentiment to even my most intimate chum. The next summer Martin Van Buren, then President of the United States, visited West Point and reviewed the cadets; but he did not impress me with the awe that Scott inspired. In fact I regarded Gen. Scott and Capt.

[illegible] to the United States service. I told him I intended to do so if there was a war. He spoke of his acquaintance with the public men of the State, and said he could get them to recommend me for a position, and that he would do all he could for me. I declined to receive indorsements for permission to fight for my country. Going home for a day or two soon after this conversation with Gen. Taylor, I wrote from Galena the following letter to the adjutant-general of the army:

GALENA, Ill., May 24, 1861.

Col. L. Thomas, Adjutant-General, U. S. A., Washington, D. C.—Sir: Having served for fifteen years in the regular army, including four years at West Point, and feeling it the duty of every one who has been educated at the government expense to offer their services for the support of that government, I have the honor, very respectfully, to tender my services, until the close of the war, in such capacity as may be offered. I would say, in view of my present age and length of service, I feel myself competent to command a regiment, if the President, in his judgment, should see fit to intrust one to me.

"Since the first call of the President I have been serving on the staff of the Governor of this State, rendering such aid as I could in the organization of our State militia, and am still engaged in that capacity. A letter addressed to me at Springfield, Ill., will reach me. I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

U. S. GRANT

"This letter failed to elicit an answer from the adjutant-general of the army. I presume it was hardly read by him and certainly it could not have been submitted to higher authority.

"At Galena in 1861 posters were stuck up calling for a meeting of the citizens at the court house in the evening. Business ceased entirely, all was excitement; for a time there were no party distinctions; all were Union men, determined to avenge the insult to the national flag. In the evening the court house was packed. Although a comparative stranger, I was called upon to preside. The sole reason, possibly, was that I had been in the army and had seen service. With much embarrassment and some prompting I made out to announce the object of the meeting. Speeches were in order, but it is doubtful whether it would have been safe just then to make other than patriotic ones. There was probably no one in the house, however, who felt like making any other. The two principal speeches were by B. B. Howard, the postmaster and a Breckinridge Democrat at the November election the fall before, and John A. Rawlins, an elector on the Douglas ticket. E. B. Washburne, with whom I was not acquainted at that time, came in after the meeting had been organized, and expressed, I understood afterward, a little surprise that Galena could not furnish a presiding officer for such an occasion without taking a stranger. He came forward and was introduced, and made a speech appealing to the patriotism of the meeting. After the speaking was over, volunteers were called for to form a company."

HIS FIRST BATTLE IN THE CIVIL WAR

Speaking of his first battle in the civil war, Gen. Grant says: "As soon as the enemy saw us, they decamped as fast as their horses would carry them. I kept my men in the ranks, and forbade their entering any of the deserted houses, or taking anything from them. We halted at night on the road, and proceeded the next morning at an early hour. Harris had been encamped in a creek bottom for the sake of being near water. The hills on either side of the creek extend to a considerable height, possibly more than 100 feet. As we approached the brow of the hill from which it was expected we could see Harris' camp, and possibly find his men ready formed to meet us, my heart kept getting higher and higher, until it felt to me as though it was in my throat. I would have given anything then to have been back in Illinois, but I had not the moral courage to halt and consider what to do; I kept right on. When we reached a point from which the valley below, was in full view I halted. The place where Harris had been encamped a few days before was still there, and the marks of a recent encampment were plainly visible, but the troops were gone. My heart resumed its place. It occurred to me at once that Harris had been as much afraid of me as I had been of him. This was a view of the question I had never taken before, but it was one I never forgot afterward. From that event to the close of the war I never experienced trepidation upon confronting an enemy.

AT THE BATTLE OF BELMONT,

fearing that the enemy we had seen crossing the river below, might be coming upon us unawares, I rode out in the field to our front—still entirely alone—to observe whether the enemy was passing. The field was grown up with corn so tall and thick as to cut off the view of even a person on horseback, except directly along the rows. Even in that direction, owing to the overhanging blades of corn, the view was not extensive. I had not gone more than a few hundred yards when I saw a body of troops marching past me, not fifty yards away. I looked at them for a moment and then turned my horse toward the river and started back, first in a walk, and when I thought myself concealed from the view of the enemy, as fast as my horse could carry me. When at the river bank I still had to ride a few hundred yards to where the nearest transport lay.

The cornfield in front of our transports terminated at the edge of a dense forest. Before I got back the enemy had entered this forest, and had opened a brisk fire upon the boats. Our men, with the exception of details that had gone to the front after the wounded, were now either aboard the transports or very near them. Those who were not on board soon got there, and the boats pushed off. I was the only man of the national army between the rebels and our transports. The captain of a boat that had just pushed out, but had not started, recognized me and ordered the engineer not to start the engine. He then had a plank run out for me. My horse seemed to take in the situation. There was no path down the bank, and every one acquainted with the Mississippi river knows that its banks, in a natural state, do not vary at any great angle from the perpendicular. My horse put his fore feet over the bank without hesitation or urging, and with his hind feet well under him, slid down the bank and trotted aboard the boat, twelve or fifteen feet away, over a single gangplank. I dismounted and went at once to the upper deck.

"The Mississippi was low on the 7th of September, 1861, so that the banks were higher than the heads of men standing on the upper decks of the steamers. The rebels were some distance back from the river, so that their fire was high and did us but little harm. Our smokestack was riddled with bullets, but there were only three men wounded on the boats and but one of these was a soldier. When I first went on deck I entered the captain's room adjoining the pilot house, and threw my-

[illegible] the field, in which he was operating to see through his own eyes the situation. Often he would be without staff officers, and when he was accompanied by them there was no prescribed order in which they followed. He was very much given to sit his horse sideways—with both feet on one side—particularly on the battlefield. Gen. Scott was the reverse in all these particulars. He always wore all the uniform prescribed, or allowed, by law, when he inspected his lines; word would be sent to all division and brigade commanders in advance, notifying them of the hour when the commanding general might be expected. This was done so that all the army might be put under arms to salute their chief as he passed. On these occasions he wore his dress uniform, cocked hat, aiguillettes, sabre and spurs. His staff proper, beside all officers constructively on his staff—engineers, inspectors, quartermasters, etc.—followed, also in uniform and in prescribed order. Orders were prepared with great care, and evidently with the view that they should be a history of what followed.

Taking a Sleeper

UNRUFFLED CONDUCTOR AND EAGER PASSENGERS—THE SERENE MAN AND HIS LOWER BERTH.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Did you ever ponder on the fact that a city fifty or seventy-five miles away is harder to get at in the matter of comfort than a city two hundred or three hundred miles away? The invention of the "sleeper" is the cause of this anomaly. It is not worth while getting into a sleeper for a one hundred mile run. You either have to start too late or get up too early, or both. But on the long route you get to bed in time and before you know it you are there. No time lost—no monotonous railway journey. The Chicago sleeper train must be a fine sight as it rushes on through the night, with the moonlight shining on it. The sleeper is larger and more splendid than the ordinary day car, and each sleeper has a fine sounding name as if it were a steamship. The names alone would make an imposing procession. There is "The Kirkwood," "The Buckingham," generally known as the "Buckingham Palace" car, the "Mattawassatossituwantine," "Klinybunk," "The Seigerackactorbunk," and so on. Anything with "bunk" in is considered especially applicable to sleepers. The companies have a standing contract with the State of Maine, from which place most of the names are taken from the stump, polished up at the shops and applied to sleepers.

As the man with his valise passes the ticket inspector at the Michigan Central station, he sees what would be considered a wonderful sight if it were not so common. There is a long line of sleepers glistening in the electric light, gilded, painted, plate-glass and silvered—gorgeous but strong. Away at the further end in the darkness stands the hissing and impatient engine, throwing a ruddy light around as the fireman opens the furnace doors. Mountains of baggage trundle past propelled by men at the mountain bases, almost hid from sight. The man who has secured his "lower center" berth and has deposited his belongings thereon, and hanging his tall hat on the polished brass, upright rod above the berth, walks serenely up and down the platform with a silk travelling cap on his head, smoking an after-supper cigar.

Around the sleeper conductor stands breathless, eager men with small valises in hand or slung with a strap from the shoulder. The conversation is about as follows:

"Say, conductor, any lowers left?"

"Have you got my name there anywhere?"

"Can't you do better than that?"

"Upper berth? No, sir. Got to give me a lower berth or I'll sue the company."

"That one's too near the door."

"That the best you can do?"

The conductor stands calm and unruffled. He goes through a hurricane of such queries every night and he minds them no more than the idle wind, which he regards not. In his hand are cards with the plans of the sleepers. Hung from his elbow is his glittering silver and glass lantern.

"What name, please? Jones? I can give you lower 7 in 'The Sagantitus,' Mr. Jones."

He crosses out the lower 7 with his pencil on the diagram.

"No, I haven't a lower left on The Yellowstoneicon. Give you upper 47. Well, if you take the Kirkwood I can let you have lower 10."

Lower 10 is marked off.

Suddenly the long line of cars give a shudder and a subdued sound of bump-bump-bump comes down along the line. The train backs a few inches and stands still again. The engine has hitched on.

On the great white disc of the tower clock, behind which quivers the intermittent arc light of electricity, the black hands point at one minute to 9. The last load of baggage has struggled on to the front. Belated travellers are hurrying through the gate. The anxiety now is not whether they get a lower bunk, but whether they catch the train.

The hands now stand at 9. The roar of escaping steam from the eager engine drowns all sounds. Everybody is on board and the porters pick up the little foot-stools with carpet-covered tops that stood at the car steps. The swarthy face of the engineer gleams in the white light as he leans out of the cab window and waits for the uplifted hand of the conductor. The man has his hand on the gate and the gate is half-way closed. An unseen electric bell rings out its sharp, piercing signal, and the deep-toned bell on the engine answers it. The last man plunges headlong through the closing gate, which clinks after him. The conductor swings himself on the last car, and with a low, muffled rumble the sleeper train begins to move.

The Chicago sleeper has gone.

THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 1885.

Many of the Democratic office seekers who are out of pocket and out of patience console themselves with the thought that they will be able to balance accounts at some future time.

Secretary Whitney has again left his desk to visit New York for a few days. It is astonishing how these hard worked Cabinet officers find so much time to devote to the political machine.

The Ohio Democrats are now urging the President to aid the party in that State by making a change in the offices at once. The workers want to know what they are to get before they commence operations.

The New York Herald has an editorial denouncing the contemptible little office hunting brigade that is now making the life of the President a burden. This is rather a severe shot at ex-Governor Plaisted who for weeks past has been one of the most prominent members of the "brigade."

The Democratic organs are getting tired of the alleged "going slow theory" which they first pretended to admire so much and are now informing the President that he should make a complete change in the offices. Their appetite is getting so vigorous that they are unable to keep up the [illegible] any longer.

The cause of the hard feeling that exists between Postmaster General Vilas and Gov. Bragg of Wisconsin is that they are rival candidates for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator before the next Legislature. It is rather a trivial matter for them to quarrel over, as neither of them is in any danger of being sent to the Senate.

There is great dissatisfaction among the New Jersey Democrats at the treatment they have received at the hands of the Administration. The faithful party workers have been snubbed and Senator McPherson, who has spent most of his time at the Capital since the adjournment of Congress, is [illegible] the result of his labors.

A [illegible] clerk appointed on the route between New York and Buffalo was able to [illegible] of fifty [illegible] prescriptions [illegible] placed before him. This [illegible] under the reform [illegible] which is [illegible] efficient officers out of their places, is referred to the editor of the [illegible] who recently [illegible] regard for the [illegible].

A [illegible] that [illegible] Davis the [illegible] of the [illegible] known as [illegible] Pennsylvania [illegible] the press. The Providence [illegible] says: Mr Davis [illegible] years [illegible] well known and highly esteemed [illegible] the [illegible] value of [illegible] sold. He was [illegible] the Stewart street [illegible] New Testament [illegible] to love and respect him.

[illegible] Senatorship. The New York [illegible] John A. Logan has [illegible] Washington and [illegible] enthusiastic [illegible] nothing like eight [illegible] Mr B[illegible] was one of the [illegible] citizens [illegible] It is [illegible] the enthusiastic [illegible] soldiers of [illegible] fired a salute in honor of the [illegible] they were unwillingly facing [illegible] President Cleveland's warmest supporters [illegible] No wonder that the Chicago [illegible] did not enjoy the sound. As for Mr B[illegible] the World [illegible] such that his greeting was both sincere [illegible].

According to the Boston Globe's Washington despatch the Chicago machine is highly indignant at the [illegible] of [illegible] The Chairman of the Cook County Democratic Committee was [illegible] outspoken. He said he represented 67,000 votes—the Cook county [illegible] and from this out they would work against the Administration. He declared [illegible] and wanted everybody to know it. [illegible] open war and Cleveland [illegible] who would win. "We are [illegible] Democrats who do all the work," he [illegible] "who spend our money, who [illegible] carry the election [illegible] do we get? Snubbed! Republicans [illegible] see the President and [illegible] We can't have a word with him. We can do the work, but can't [illegible] anything to say. There is not an office [illegible] disposal I would take but [illegible] by my friends."

The more thoughtful of Democratic [illegible] think the removal of ex-Senator [illegible] Register of the Treasury and the appointment of General Rosecrans in his place was the worst political blunder the President has yet made. "There are about 7,000,000 negroes in the country, and [illegible] has been their sole representative in the higher departments of the Executive branch of the government. He is a man of irreproachable character, intelligence [illegible] The Democrats wish to win the confidence of the negroes, who are a potent force in the politics of the South," [illegible] prominent Democratic Senator to a [illegible] correspondent. "How [illegible] we do it? The foremost negro in the [illegible] possibly, excepting Fred Douglass, has been removed from office and a Democrat put in his place. If we had wanted to inspire the negroes with confidence in the new Administration, how could it have been better done than by keeping Mr Bruce in office? He was a former Senator of the United States, his commission had not expired, and no charges were preferred against him. His resignation was requested, and, I think, most injudiciously, to make a place for General Rosecrans. There is only one way in which the Administration can repair this blunder, and that is to appoint Bruce or some other colored man to a position of equal prominence with the one he has vacated."

It turns out that the Postmaster General has heard of no conspiracy among the railway postal clerks to strike because of the changes which are being made. There is, however, a very general suspicion among this class of public servants that they are to be rotated just as soon as Democrats can be sufficiently instructed to make it reasonably safe to do so. Quite a number of efficient men have already been dismissed to make room for the sons and friends of Democratic politicians.—Boston Journal.

President Cleveland's Third Auditor of the Treasury Department, Col. John S Williams, of Indiana, the man who ordered the pictures of Grant and Wilson removed from his office, has just been caned in the public streets by a prominent member of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Williams is editor of the Lafayette Sunday Times, and arrived at his home Saturday. On the following day his paper contained several references to the lady in question and on Monday she met him on the street, took his cane from him and dusted his jacket quite effectually. Nice man that for a Government office.

A Washington despatch announces that Assistant Postmaster General Hay, who was put on salary nearly three months before he began to perform any service, has appointed George B. [illegible] as Postmaster at Milo, in place of Mrs Clara M. Owen, removed. The despatch says that Mr Hay declines to give the cause, but says it is "the pleasurable discretion of the Postmaster General and for other good reasons." Mrs Owen is the widow of the former Postmaster, who served his country as a gallant soldier, and at the time of his death the citizens of Milo very earnestly petitioned for her appointment, which was promptly made on recommendation of the Representative from this District. We do not know the appointee, who is a new comer in the town, but this removal of a soldier's widow from a little office that was a help in supporting her fatherless children, will be regarded by most people without regard to politics as pretty small business.

The Republicans of Ohio hold their State Convention at Springfield to-day. There is a spirited but friendly contest for the nomination of Governor. All reports from the State indicate a most harmonious feeling in the ranks of the party in spite of the efforts of Democratic papers to create dissension, and whoever receives the nomination will have the solid strength of the party behind him. The election is one of especial importance, as in addition to the State officers the Legislature to be chosen will elect a successor to Senator Sherman. Hence the Republicans have called their convention at this early day to enable them to place the issues involved in the campaign in a clear light before the voters. The Akron Beacon prints a table showing the preferences of the delegates from fifty-one of the eighty-eight counties of the State. In these fifty-one counties, 472 of the 758 delegates that will appear in the convention are represented. Of these, 268 are for Foraker, 68 for Beatty, 68 for Kennedy, 23 for Perkins, 2 for Ross, 63 doubtful. With this set of figures if Foraker gets the 77 delegates from Hamilton County he will have 345, which will leave him only 55 short of the 400 requisite to nominate.

The New England Offices.

[Special Dispatch to the Boston Herald.]

WASHINGTON, June 9. New England matters do not progress as rapidly as even the most patient office-seekers desire. There is no apparent change in the situation as to any of the more important offices. The fact has only recently been discovered that ten days ago Col. Morton, the Augusta Post Office aspirant, arrived in Washington, in response to a notification from Gov. Plaisted, that a personal interview with the President would benefit his cause. Plaisted arranged the interview, and Morton had a long talk with the President and left the city the same day confident that the matter was settled in his favor. The reasons for delay are not given, but it is claimed that Morton was assured that he would be appointed in due time. Col. [illegible] said to-day that the matter is still unsettled.

Gov. Plaisted is sought by New England men who arrive here and questioned as to the general situation. He tells all that there are going to be fewer changes than is anticipated, and that the removals will be gradual. There will be no removals in New England, he says, except upon charges gravely affecting the competence or integrity of officials, and the proofs will have to be as conclusive as if it was a Democratic official whose removal was sought. Plaisted does not know why this policy should be more strictly applied to New England than to other sections, but is convinced that it will be. The President, Secretary Manning and Postmaster General Vilas, he says, have taken an emphatic stand against removals which can be fairly questioned by the Senate. One theory as to this determination concerning New England is that the Senatorial representation being Republican there would be little hope of any New England confirmation if opposition was provoked by unwarranted removals or flagrant violations of civil service reform pledges, while on the other hand, the Administration might derive important assistance from the New England Senators if they were convinced by the fairness of the changes made.

Colonel Vilas and his Policy.

[Chicago Inter Ocean.]

Two items of news, one from Washington and the other from Madison, dovetail together so closely that they seem to form one piece of information. We refer to the proposed appointment of thirty six post office inspectors and the card in a Madison paper of Captain Hugh Lewis, a very active Democratic politician of Wisconsin, announcing his withdrawal from the party to which he has hitherto been attached.

It is not because Postmaster General Vilas and Captain Lewis are townsmen that the two bits of intelligence fit in together. That is unimportant, except as it would indicate that Colonel Vilas is not making progress toward supplanting Senator Sawyer, as he hoped to do by virtue of his present position. The main point is the suggestive evidence afforded that political hypocrisy is bad policy.

The first reason given by Captain Lewis for his course does not apply to Colonel Vilas, except in a general way, namely, the partiality of the Administration to rebels. It is the State Department which has given most occasion for that accusation. The Secretary of the Interior has also in a few instances been guilty of the same wrong, notably in the dismissal from the pension bureau of Clerk Stephenson, who has four rebel bullets in his body, and against whom nothing could be alleged except that a Congressman demanded his head on a charger, or, as the new version has it, on a platter. It would seem that the war services of Colonel Vilas are a protection against any special precipitancy in that direction. But either by choice or accident he is the representative and exponent, in conspicuous singleness, of the policy of pretending to obey the demands of civil service reform while really adhering to the spoils system.

That "confidential" circular letter of his was enough to disgust any honest man. It was in effect notice to the aspirants for postoffices that some charge of "offensive partisanship" must be trumped up, and that almost any pretext of that kind would answer the purpose, if only presented in due form. The stiletto of the assassin must take the place of the soldier's saber, and the work of looting must be done behind the mask of reform. There must be a good many Captain Lewises in the party founded by Andrew Jackson.

It will be remembered that one of the first things done by the Postmaster General was to reduce the force of inspectors, and special care was taken to make it appear that the object in view was retrenchment rather than the displacement of Republicans in the interest of Democrats. The truth of the matter now stands disclosed. Three months have not yet elapsed since those dismissals, and now it is announced in regard to these very inspectorships, "the vacancies to be filled number about thirty six." This tells the story. The mask drops at once and reveals the Postmaster General as he is, a thorough-paced Democrat, with no just claims to anything higher.

NO ONE WILL DISPUTE.
Life is in constant danger of terminating. This is a statement no one will dispute. A life that is earning anything more than the amount necessary to sustain it, has a money value to some one. The value of a life is as much insurable as a house or a ship. When a wife and small children are dependent upon the income from a single life for their home, food, education, &c. it becomes a serious question should that life terminate from whence comes their support.
Life insurance comes in and says give a small sum yearly, and your wife and children will be protected. The young man with a family, before he accumulates much, can throw around them no other protection. By the proper use of a small sum he can guarantee an ample security. It can be done in no other way—hence the popular verdict is in favor of Life Insurance and particularly in favor of the Conn. Mutual Life with its cash values and paid amounts, printed into the policy. It is a contract I take pleasure in showing to any and all who will call at my office.

RHODE ISLAND

The Diocesan Episcopal Convention

PROVIDENCE, June 10. The Diocesan Convention reassembled at Grace church at 9.30 this morning. Rev. C. A. L. Richards, from Committee on Canons, reported the amendment providing that three-fourths of the members of the standing committee, rather than two-thirds, with the consent of the Bishop may consent to the admission of a parish, passed. Also presented, the report of the Committee on Canons with accompanying canon, relative to the appointment of a committee upon the religious training of the young. Considerable discussion was indulged in as to whether this matter was germane and the canon was approved and laid over under the rules till the next convention for adoption.

An amendment, introduced by Dr. Greer, requiring parishes applying for union with the convention to show proof of their incorporation, was adopted. The committee on that part of the Bishop's address of last year, relating to a missionary fund of $1,000,000, reported without recommendation and was discharged. The Committee on Canons reported a substitute for section four of article four of the constitution and the canon requiring a vote of three-fourths of the members of the convention present and voting to drop a parish from membership in the convention was adopted. The elections were then held.

Singular Attempt at Suicide

NEWPORT, June 10. A terrific explosion occurred this morning in Joseph Renson's liquor store, blowing out a part of the front of the building. When the police entered the building Renson was found in the cellar in great agony. He had been on a spree and had procured a keg of powder and after inflicting horrible and unmentionable injuries to himself with a razor, had fired the powder. He was taken to the hospital, but cannot live, it is thought. Renson was recently divorced and married again. His wife was up stairs at the time and knew nothing of the matter until the house shook from the explosion. The unfortunate man said he meant to commit suicide.

Passers-by Wounded by the Explosion

PROVIDENCE, June 10. In a carriage passing Renson's place at the time of the explosion at Newport were Mrs. Beemis, of New York, and her two daughters. The youngest, twelve years old, was badly wounded on the arm and was taken to the store of Caswell, Massey & Co., where her wounds, which are severe but not dangerous, were dressed.

Held for Trial in $50,000 Bail.

Before United States Commissioner Douglass, William Tully Torrance, the embezzling teller of the Providence National Bank, appeared this morning. He waived examination and was held for trial in default of $50,000 bail, being the bail fixed at his first arraignment.

The June Crop Reports.

The June report of the Department of Agriculture will make an increase in the cotton area of 5 to 6 per cent. The total area exceeds 18,000,000 acres. The plant is of healthy growth, nearly an average, and the stand good. Where the recent rains have been excessive the crop is in grass. The general average is 92 which is higher than in the preceding years in June. There is an unusual uniformity in the condition, only Tennessee showing less than 90. The condition of winter wheat is reported lower than ever before, the general percentage has declined from 70 per cent in May to 62. In some States there has been a greater loss of area than anticipated in previous reports. The average yield will be less than 10 bushels per acre.

The probable product of winter wheat States, according to these returns, is reduced to about 207,000,000 bushels, but none of the Territories are included in the winter wheat area. The report of spring wheat is more favorable, the condition is 97 per cent and indicates a crop of about 153,000,000 bushels. The present report, therefore, indicates a wheat crop of 330,000,000 bushels, 23,000,000 bushels smaller than in 1881. The general condition of rye is 83 per cent. The area of barley is nearly the same as in 1884, and the average of condition is 89 per cent. The acreage of oats is increased 4 per cent and the average of condition is 94 per cent. Corn will be reported in July but voluntary returns indicate an increase of area.

NEW YORK

A Scaly Fish Splutters on the Gridiron

NEW YORK, June 10. The examination of James D. Fish, ex-President of the late Marine Bank, continued to-day before the referee at the Ludlow street jail, on behalf of Julien T. Davies, receiver of Grant & Ward, to discover whether or not any lands and buildings owned by Fish were purchased with money secured from the defunct firm. Mr. Fish was stubborn to the question as to the number of lots owned by Fish in Chicago, Fish said that they were purchased by him during the past three years and became angry when asked if they were purchased with money got from Grant & Ward. He blurted out once or twice "Don't ask such —— foolish questions."

When questioned as to his stock operations with Grant & Ward Fish said, "I had thousands and thousands of dollars worth of stock stolen from me." He was very vigorous in his denunciation of Ward's mining schemes. "I bought stock in a mine from Grant & Ward," said witness, "but it was a —— swindle. I bought and paid for many mines which only existed in the imagination of Ward. I was induced to take hold of Ward's smelter, but Ward's brother told me they never had a smelter."

"How about the Mono Mine?" "The Mono Mine was one of Buck Grant's," was the retort, "that was a swindle too. The individual next door, Ward, can give you valuable information on these things." To other questions witness replied, "why don't you examine the gentleman next door?" "Well," replied the Counsel, "you issue a subpoena duces tecum and we will bring him in." "Just bring him in and he'll get a black eye and broken neck," shouted Fish, and he looked as if he would carry the threat into effect. The examination was adjourned indefinitely.

After receiving the hearty congratulations of those present a brief period was passed in viewing the many useful and ornamental presents which had been liberally bestowed upon the happy couple. Webber and this building, together with another house, barn, blacksmith shop, two hundred thousand shingles and the mill itself were entirely consumed. The dam across the stream was saved. The buildings burned were all quite old, with the exception of the mill, which was erected last spring. Mr. Webber estimates his entire loss at $2,000 and there is an insurance of $500 in Mr. C. P. Wiggin's agency in this city. Mr. Webber was in the railroad depot at Alton when informed of the fire and while talking of the matter with his informant somebody raised a cry of fire and the party saw flames on the roof of the depot. These were soon extinguished and before much damage had been done. The fire caught from sparks from a donkey engine running a machine for sawing wood in the Mallon yard.

NEWS FROM BRADFORD. Our correspondent writes: Last Sabbath there was a baptism at the pond near Bradford village. At about nine o'clock people began to arrive from all directions and by 10.30 A. EXCURSION TO PORTLAND. We learn that the Sons of Veterans, with their friends in this part of the State, will make an excursion from Bangor to Portland on board the steamer Cimbria during the Grand Army National Encampment. The Cimbria under the command of Capt. S. H. Barbour, will leave Bangor, Monday morning, June 22, touching at the river landings, and arriving in Portland the same evening. She will make excursions in Portland Harbor Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, visiting all points of interest, including Cushing's and Peaks islands. The Cimbria will return to Bangor on Friday, arriving that evening. The round trip tickets for this excursion are limited and may be had of the Sons of Veterans of this city. As the coming Encampment will be one of the most memorable events in the history of our State it is not surprising that people by thousands will attend from this section of Maine, and there will be no means of going more pleasant than by steamer Cimbria. It is now estimated upon good authority that 100,000 people will be in Portland on Tuesday, the 23rd inst., when the grand parade of at least 20,000 veterans will present one of the most magnificent military displays ever witnessed in this State.

CITY AND SEMINARY

How they Seem after Twenty five Years.

Mr. Editor: While the Theological Seminary is in a sense a denominational institution it is in no sense partizan. Every citizen of Bangor must feel a just pride in its history and success, to which this city has so largely contributed. Its long succession of students were each three years in close contact with the scenery, the political, social and religious life of Bangor and that at an age when impressions are most indelible. Therefore though Bangor may forget us as individuals who have merely floated like chips on the current of its life, we can never forget Bangor. Our class who were privileged to be in your city in 1857-60, graduated but twelve members, six of whom have been permitted to re-visit you in 1885. Others came by letter. But one had died. Eighteen hundred and fifty seven and eight was the year of the great famous "revival." Daily morning union prayer meetings filling the largest rooms with intensely interested congregations, were a feature never known before and never repeated since. This introduced us to the religious people more largely than anything else could, and made our prayer meeting and Sunday School work more enjoyable and effective. "West Bangor," the "Beecroft Neighborhood" and "Essex street" were places as familiar to us as the churches themselves.

The political agitation culminating in the war was at its height. Next to the intensely spiritual preaching of the revival period, the politico-moral discourses of Rev. Mr. Little and Prof. Samuel Harris cannot be forgotten. Professors Pond and Shepard and Rev. Messrs. Everett and Caldwell were equally pronounced in their anti-slavery opinions and their love for the Union. Indeed there was to my knowledge hardly an exception among the religious people of Bangor. They were enthusiastic friends of their country. The churches and the Seminary itself furnished their full quota of self-sacrificing soldiers.

But now for the reunion of 1885. A quiet, well-served supper in a retired room at the Bangor House and the prolonged sessions at the Seminary itself; a delightful drive around the beautiful suburbs, rich in twenty-five years of growth and improvements; a visit to the lovely city of the dead, Mount Hope, and the graves of Professors Pond and Shepard; such were the points around which clustered the reminiscences of a quarter of a century. It can do no harm to mention without names, or dates or statistics that such as chose had an opportunity to tell their classmates personal matter like these: Health and weight; number of pastorates, (one man had had but one); number received with the church (one had received about 900); revivals enjoyed, salaries, libraries, published writings, children, bereavements, pecuniary valuation, impressions of the Seminary, the city, our teachers and old friends. One can see that the garrulous, the humorous, those in "anecdotage" were not without opportunity.

Our love for Alma Mater was revived, our affection for each other rekindled and our esteem for the dear old city of the river and the hills was augmented. Gratitude, thanksgiving and supplication for future blessings on all, such was the immediate fruits of our reunion. Other classes ought not to miss for the useless grand an occasion. 1860

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

Early Sunday morning, Elder Knight's residence and outbuildings were destroyed by fire in Auburn. The family were in bed when the fire caught and barely escaped with their lives. Loss $5,000

A. A. Garcelon, of Auburn, found himself owner of a colt last week, sired by "Young Monogram," which, when twelve hours old, measured ten and a half hands in height. Horsemen say that he is one of the largest colts ever born in this county.

"We haven't much of a nine, but I guess we can beat the Lewiston ball-tossers," is the reply made by Mayor Haskell, of Auburn, Monday, to a question by the Journal reporter in regard to the acceptance of the base ball challenge from the Lewiston aldermen. Mayor Haskell has seen four of the aldermen and they have agreed to go into training at once. After certain preliminaries are arranged, a definite reply will be made to the challenge. Mayor Haskell thinks that the game will be played, but is not yet ready to definitely make answer.

A. J. Pierce, Esq., of Augusta, Ga., agent of the Sibley Mills, formerly of the Lincoln Mill in Lewiston, is in that city on a brief visit. Mr Pierce's mill runs 35,000 spindles in the production of ducks, plaids and sheetings. Mr. Pierce says his goods are pretty well sold up and his mill yet continues in operation. Mr. Pierce says the greatest trouble in the south in manufacturing, is in the labor. Labor is not so skilled as northern labor, and does not stick to the loom like northern labor. On an average men in the mills in this section average about ten days' work in two weeks. They are in the habit of taking a day's outing a week. Mr. Pierce thinks in course goods the Southern mills will do well but he does not believe they will successfully compete with northern mills on fine goods. That is the opinion of experts in general.

Cumberland.

Sunday noon, two roughs, filled with rum, attacked a young fellow on the corner of Center and Congress streets, Portland, and beat him badly. They chased him over into Preble street, where there was another fight, when one of the fellows drew a knife and flourished it. They then started down Middle street, through Free and down Center, a crowd of several hundred people following them. The men were finally arrested. Their names are Miland and Malcern.

Kennebec.

Mr Ephraim Forsyth, of Gardiner, the oldest business man on the street, retired Monday. Mr Forsyth has been engaged in the grocery business fifty years, and has occupied one store for forty years.

A Hallowell gentleman, recently connected with the mail service, will enter into the business of poultry farming. He has already purchased an incubator of the hot water variety. It requires much skill and perseverance to reap success in the poultry business, and many lessons must be learned by experience. One Augusta citizen once sunk $1,000 in a poultry ranch.

Lincoln.

Mrs Sarah Small, of Bowdoinham, will be 103 years old on the seventeenth day of November next. Mrs. Small still retains her faculties in a degree, knowing her bodily requirements. Her oldest daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Hinkley, aged eighty-three, is a bright-eyed, clear-minded, intelligent lady, to whom a ride in a jolting ox-cart, a number of miles, recently, seemed not an arduous undertaking.

Somerset.

Superintendent Stanford went to Bingham, Saturday, to look after the building of a telephone line from Bingham to the Forks. He attached an instrument to the telegraph line, via Anson and Norridgewock to Skowhegan and talked with Skowhegan and Lewiston. The distance from Bingham to The Forks is thirty-three miles.

Washington.

On Friday of last week, John Libby, of Harrington, aged seventy-six years, dropped dead from heart disease while at work in the field.

Zina Pennell, of Whitneyville, shot the bear the other day which had been seen a number of times this spring between Machias and Whitneyville.

On Tuesday last, Mr. Sewell Stuart, of Machiasport, a carpenter at work on Sch. Decora, fell from the main deck beam into the hold of the vessel, injuring his side and back.

Samuel Kincaid, of Columbia, of Company C, Twenty-eighth Maine Regiment, has just been awarded $2,100 back pay and a pension of twelve dollars per month.

Arthur S. Campbell, of Cherryfield, who is to superintend the construction of the telegraph line to be erected between Portland and Boston, by the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company, has recently been to Penobscot county and purchased 25,000 poles and has also written here for men and horses.

Bark peeling on the various Townships in the vicinity of the Beddington Lumber will be in full blast by next week. During the past few days large crews have been arriving from the Eastern part of the country for the purpose of engaging in the business. It is said that three hundred hands will be employed during the season.

The new schooner Carrie May, built by the Jonesboro Lumber Company, is to be commanded by Capt. Freeman Ellwell, of South Thomaston. This company, under the supervision of master carpenter W. L. Pepper, are building a centre-board schooner of about 250 tons, which they propose to launch before the close of the present year, and should the prospect warrant, will set up the frame for a schooner of 50 tons.

Thursday night the barn of [illegible] Lank of Danforth was entered, and a harness and two bags of oats and peas were taken. The same night Edward Boyer lost a harness from his barn. E. L. Hoyt in Weston lost his robes, [illegible] The tracks were [illegible] in the morning so that the thief was tracked into Weston. About night the officers arrest [illegible] R. N. Rockwell in the woods where he was with his team. They [illegible] part of the goods with him, but did not find the balance until Saturday when a large posse went out and succeeded after a long hunt in finding them in the bushes. Rockwell served a sentence of two years in State prison for a similar [illegible].

Mr. Otis S. Foss and his wife, of Machias, narrowly escaped a fatal accident on Tuesday. Mr. Foss had raised his house and ell some four feet from its former foundation, and while it was resting on the jack screws, and when Mr. and Mrs. Foss were in the kitchen, being the ell, the structure fell, with scarcely any warning. Mrs. Foss was quite severely injured in the region of the chest, and was for a day or two in a good deal of pain, and it was thought at first that she might be hurt internally, but we believe she is now considered out of danger. Mrs Foss was not so badly hurt as her husband. The cause of the ell falling was that before being raised it was disconnected from the wood shed, and the end not being boarded had very little to prevent it from falling sidewise.

York.

Last Friday night, the store of S. Meserve & Son, at Bar Mills, was entered, the safe broken open, and the contents rifled. Fortunately, the greater part of the money that the thieves had reason to suspect would be in the safe, had been paid out that day. They got less than $20 in cash. About two years ago the safe was opened, but nothing of value stolen.

Capt. N. H. Costello, a retired ship master of Wells, was drowned June 7th, while crossing the river at Wells Beach with his team. The Captain was suffering at the time from the effects of a dislocated shoulder, rendering one arm useless, and the horse becoming unmanageable he was unable to control him. The body has not yet been found.

The body of another infant has been discovered in Biddeford. Saturday forenoon, City Marshal Harmon noticed a salt-box behind Rumery & Hill's sign, on Main street, directly under Dr. Frank Gratton's office. His suspicions were aroused, and he sent for a ladder, while he remained to watch the box. Before the ladder arrived the city marshal saw Dr. Gratton come to the window several times in an excited manner. When the ladder arrived an investigation was made, and the box was found to contain the body of a male infant. Dr. Gratton was immediately arrested, and a little later his housekeeper was taken into custody. The doctor says the child was that of a woman by the name of Patten, whom he was called to attend a few days since, and that when born it was very weak, and he told her that it could not possibly live. It died some time during the night, and as they were poor, he told them to bring it to him and he would bury it. It was warm in the house, and he put it out there where it was found. The woman told the doctor that she was married, but he did not see her husband the night he tended her. A visit was made to the woman and she corroborated the doctor's story. Dr. Gratton is the same man who created the excitement in the winter of 1883, when blood was discovered on Birch street, in Biddeford.

DON'T ALLOW YOURSELF TO THINK —THAT THE—

BALDWIN

Dry-Air Refrigerator

Is an ordinary one similar to those sold by other dealers. They differ from them in the most important points. They have no zinc linings in the provision room. Refrigerators are lined with zinc because their faulty construction makes it necessary, the air in them being so damp that they would swell and warp out of shape if they were not lined. The presence of zinc lining is a practical confession of its unfitness for a receptacle for food.

J. M. Toner, M. D., Surgeon General U. S., says: "There is as much danger from keeping food in illy constructed refrigerators, as from sewer gas escaping inside the dwelling."

FOR BILIOUS COMPLAINTS.

Bilious Complaints are caused by torpidity, congestion, or the ulceration of the liver.

WARREN LELAND,

whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the Largest Hotel Enterprises

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of emigration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AYER'S SARSAPARILLA in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND's farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND's direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. LELAND has personally used for Rheumatism, with entire success, and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. LELAND's permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. LELAND's extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.
